LIGHT-RESISTANT LABEL

Strength and durability.

LIGHT-RESISTANT LABEL.

Labels are one of the most important allies of products, because labels identify products, but also to highlight and make them stand out from their competitors.
Under certain conditions, labels are subject to aging or weathering. An example is that of labels of products displayed in shop-windows, greenhouses or outdoors: day after day, sunlight weathers the label and makes it less and less readable.

For this type of application, the Aro Group has designed light resistant labels, whose materials and colors are specifically produced to maintain the same quality even after a long exposure to light.
